I wanted to give that man a lecture then and there. I had to bite my tongue to keep it still, but remembered my mission was to sew and not to meddle in affairs. I hope he may read this little sketch and therefore will say to him, here, a few of the things I wanted so much to

George Bradley! I know a man greatly your superior in all manliness; earning five dollars where you can earn one; who, if he had been in your place to-night, would have kindled the fire and put the kettle over it, and then would have taken care of the babies while the mother prepared the supper. He would make it his every day duty to fill and trim the lamps and would considered it far more dignified and manly to put the little ones to bed, while his wife could wash the dishes, than to sit down to enjoy his pipe or his paper while his tired wife was still toiling on. I know you were tired. But so was she. Her work day has been just as long as yours. Nellie is a brave and true woman. She does not sigh or fret for the dresses and ribbons, and other things with which she used to adorn herself in her girlhood. She says heartily, as she kisses her little ones, "They are worth all they cost." She will work with and for you uncomplainingly, but her woman heart longs for her husband's appreciation and sympathy. Do not let the weaker shoulders bear the heaviest burdens, but patiently working, kindly bear ye one another's burdens, and you shall find the toiling and planning, and the self-denial shall bring you the nearer together; and though your hearts and hands may seem many times ready to fail, still your home shall be a happy refutation of the proverb, "When poverty comes in at the door, love flies out of the window."—American Rural Home.

Horrible Death of an Aeronaut.

The Michigan papers give details of the death of Edward La Mountain, the eronaut, brother of the celebrated John La Mountain, who made an ascension from Watertown, accompanied by John A. Haddock, several years ago. Edward made an ascension from Ionia, on the Fourth. We make this extract: Everything being in readiness, the words "let go" were given, and the air ship darted up with great rapidity, while the daring æronaut waved his hat to the uneasy, uncertain multitude who almost

"The Prayer for Landlords," which occurs in one of the liturgies put forth by Edward VI., is an admirable specimen of plain speaking, and was clearly intended to be addressed to one section of the congregation, instead of being offered by all. A contemporary quotes it at length, but the following sample will be sufficient to show its pertinacity: "We heartily pray Thee that "Yes, spry as a snail," was his reply; they (who possess the grounds, pastures and he hid himself behind a newspaper. and dwelling-places of the earth) may Just then the baby George woke, and not rack and stretch out the rents of the other child clung to her dress skirt, their houses and lands, nor yet take unand thus she prepared the evening meal. reasonable fines and incomes after the When it was ready, George laid aside his manner of covetous worldlings, but so

English Country Life.

Erom an article by Reginald Wynford in the February number of Lippincott's Magazine, we extract the following. The writer is speaking of persons in English country life, whose income is three thousand pounds and upward: Breakfast is served from nine to eleven A. M. In October, at ten A. M., famiy prayers occur in nine out of ten famiies before the meal is served.

On the table, at equi-distant points, stand two tiny tables, or dumb-waiters, which are made to revolve. On these are placed sugar, cream, butter, preserves salt, pepper, mustard, etc., so that every one can help himself without troubling On the sideboard are three beautiful silver dishes with spirit lamps beneath them. Let us look under their covers. Broiled chicken, fresh mushrooms on toast, and stewed kidney. On a larger dish is fish, and ranged behind these hot viands are cold ham, tongue, pheasant and game-pie. On huge platters of wood with knives to correspond, are farmhouse brown bread and white bread, while on the breakfast table itself, you will find hot rolls, toast-of which two or three fresh relays are brought in during breakfast-buttered toast, muffins, and the

and "jam" of apricot and other fruit, always form a part of an English or Scotch oreakfast. The luncheon hour is from one to two. At luncheon there will be a roast leg of mutton or some such piece de resistance, and various sorts of pastry. These, with bread, butter, fruit, cheese, sherry, port, claret and beer, complete the meal. Few of the men of the party are present at this meal, and those who are, eat but little, reserving their forces until dinner. All is placed on the table at once, and not, as at dinner, in courses. The servants leave the room when they have placed every thing on the table, and peoole wait on themselves. About five o'clock, tea is served. The dressing-bell rings at seven o'cleck, summoning all to prepare for the great event of the day-dinner.

Every one dons evening-attire for this meal; and strong a feeling obtains on this point that if, in case of his luggage going wrong or other accident, a man is compelled to join the party in morning clothes, he feels painfully "fish-out-ofwaterish." We know, indeed, of a case in which a guest would not come down to dinner until the arrival of his things, which did not make their appearance for week. There are few houses nowadays in which the gentlemen linger in the dinning room long after the ladies have left it. Habits of hard drinking are now almost entirely confined to young men in dressed young girl, and thinking as I looked at her beautiful clothes, "I wonder if she takes half as much pains with her body?" A poor old man was coming up the walk with a loaded wheel-barrow and just before he reached us he made house; but the gate was heavy, and would swing back before he could get in. "Wait," said the young girl, springing forward, "I'll hold the gate open." And she held the gate until he had passed in, mile as she passed on. "She deserves to have beautiful clothes," I thought, "for a beautiful spirit dwells in her breast."

A Memorial of Aaron Burr.

CHAPTER I.

HIS BIRTH, EARLY DAYS, AND ENTRANCE INTO THE ARMY.

Aaron Burr, an American politcian and third Vice-President of the United States, was born the 6th of February, 1756, at Newark, N. J. When he was one year, seven months and eighteen days old his father, Rev. Aaron' Burr, died, after establishing Princeton College. Immediately after this man's death, Jonathan Edwards, the grandfather of A. Burr was elected President of the College. Soon after his arrival the death of his father occurred. Two months later Jonathan Edwards died of a fever. Sixteen days after Mrs. Esther Burr, the mother of A. Burr, and daughter of Jonathan Edwards, died of the same disease. So Aaron Burr and his sister were left orphans, with a large amount of money. They went to live in Philadelphia with a friend of Mrs. Burr. After six months stay in this city the widow of Pres. Edwards came to take them to her home; but after her arrival she died. Thus in a space of thirteen months Aaron Burr lost his father, mother, grandfather, grandmother and great-grandfather. These children were reared by their uncle. Timothy Edwards, son of Jonathan Edwards. At the age of ten Burr ran away to sea and became a cabin-boy. One day he noticed a ministerial looking man coming down the wharf, whom he found to be his uncle. Immediately he climbed up the rigging. and was out of his way by the time he came on deck. He was ordered down, but he would not come. Persuading was then tried, but to no purpose; so his uncle negotiated with him upon the condition that no evil would happen to him; the boy would come down. He then descended and went home to his books. At the age of eleven he applied for admission at Princeton College, but was not allowed to enter on account of his being young. He not only was young, but also small, which made the natter appear ridiculous to the examiners. At the age of thirteen he addressed the faculty for admission in the Junior class, but was only allowed to enter the Sophomore. The right age for this class. was fifteen. After finishing his college course, he spent a year in idleness, being in no hurry for a profession, having enough money to live on; but towards the end of his second year's vacation he commenced to study law. He had no sooner heard of the battle at Lexington, than he threw aside his law books and wrote to a young friend of his, by the name of Ogden, to come on to a certain place and go with him Marmalade (Marie Malade) of oranges to the place of war. But Ogden replied that he could not in such haste make preparations to leave home. Burr wrote again. While Ogden seemed still undecided, came the news that a thousand of the British army had fallen on Bunker Hill through the bravery of some and a made dish, such as minced veal, country people. He then saddled his horse and rode for Ogden, and both two hot dishes of meat, and several cold, went to Boston a few days after Washington had taken the command. The camp, during their stay, was in a disorderly state. Burr was soon fretted into a fever, which lasted a short time. One day, while tossing upon his bed, he heard Ogden tarking with a rew other soluters about a proposed journey. He called Ogden to his bedside and asked him what journey he was going to take. Ogden answered that they were going to join. General Arnold in the march through the woods of Maine to Quebec, expecting there to have Montgomery come from Montreal and help capture the city. Instantly Burr satupinhis bed, and told him that he was determined to go with them. He soon arose and dressed himself and started for Newburyport, a distance of 36 miles from Boston. "It was fifty days after leaving Newburyport before Arnold, with the loss of exactly half his force, saw the heights of Quebec.' Arnold desired Burr to take a message to Montgomery telling him about his arrival and plans. He did so, dressing himself like a French priest, (because there was no danger of the English disturbing the French.) He could speak Latin well, and knew enough of French to speak Latin in the French manthe army and the lower classes. The ner. He arrived safe with the message evenings are spent chiefly in conversation; to Montgomery, staying there until preparations were made by the General, then marched to the aid of Arnold. A council of war was soon held, in which Burr and Ogden were both present, "and it was determined to make the an attempt to take the place by assault." This attempt came off on one dark and stormy night in the latter part of December, 1775. As they neared a block-house a sailor who had left his post came back to see the reason why the Americans did not adtheir black coats for dressing-gowns our vance. all of them that were in front, except Burr. The soldiers were greatly excited by the fall of their leader; but Burr kept cool, and would have entered the lower town, but for the order of the commanding officer to retreat. The American forces stayed around Quebec until spring; Arnold doing nothing all of this time, but parading with his soldiers before the eyes of the British, and send-ing messages to them to surrender up the city. In the spring the Americans had to retreat before the new army of Burgoyne to Montreal. During Burr's stay in this city his dislike to Arnold increas so that he decided to leave, which he did. When he arrived at Albany he received word that the Commander-in-Chief, Washington, would like to have him come and stay in his family until he could find some office in the army. He lived with his family at Richmond Hill, (then two miles from New York city), which was Burr's residence in after life, about six weeks, after which he served as aid-

Burglary.

On monday night the store of Henry C. Peck of this village was entered by burglars, who blew the door of the safe to pieces, and took about one hundred dollars in money. There was no one sleeping in the store, but the fact that they overlooked, or neglected to take, more money than they carried away, seems to indicate that they fancied themselves disturbed. The explosion was heard by several of our citizens; Mr. A. Thomas lighted a lamp in his house and went into the street but saw nothing. It is thought the light may have frightened the burglars. The robbery was not discovered until morning. Nothing has yet been heard of the perpetrators. This is another instance showing the necessity of increased vigilance on the part of our citizens, and of placing a watch in the streets.

The entertainment given by the Laies' Aid Society of the Episcopal church, on Tuesday evening, was largely attend ed and passed off pleasantly. wood Sewing Circle" did its gossip and slander and tea drinking naturally and with spirit, but there was frequent change of scene, and the illustration of the "total depravity of inanimate things" given by the curtains in refusing to act when it was imperative that they should move, detracted somewhat from the effect. The intermission of fifteen minutes was pleasantly spent by most of the audience in eating ice-cream or strawberry ice. The ladies of this society know well how to tempt the appetite.

"Poor Pillicoddy," another of the main features of the evening, was amusing in the extreme, and the acting good, particularly that of Mr. T. G. Packer and Miss Josie Smith. Judging from appearances, "Poor Pillicoddy" was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. "Drifting Away," "They talk of you, they talk of me," and "Over There" were sung by Mrs. C. F. ### PARISH.

During the past few days there has een considerable excitement in regard to iminals, not ours, but other criminals. A two-days lawsuit has been held here the Onondaga Penitentiary at the present | before Justices Potter and Edick, upon complaint of Prof. Sweet, of Dugway. It appears that on the third inst. that "certain awd persons of the baser sort," entered pon the Professor's premises and materially injured his house and household furniture. Complaint was entered before Justice Potter, and officers Talcott and Brockway arrested some of the parties, (names not known to us) while others scaped; most of the parties are held for cognizance before the court. Such conluct should be frowned upon by every ndividual, and all rowdies should be severely punished. Doubtless all the respectable people of Dugway regret the occurrence. If people dislike another individual, there are other ways to get along besides taking the law into their own hands and inflicting personal injury. We understand the rowdies disliked Prof. Sweet pecause he was unwilling to be disturbed by them on the Sabbath. A short time since a valuable span of horses was stolen in Carthage, Jefferson county, and last Sunday they were traced

by an officer to this place. Here, for a short time, they lost track of the horses and thief. The officer employed Mr. Edwin Lynch of this place to assist him. In passing by us they enquired and we showed them marks which convinced Mr. Lynch and the officer that they were on the right track, which proved so to be; by inquiring and otherwise they traced the horses and thief to Savannah, Wayne ounty. They found the horses under a shed, but the thief had passed on. They pursued the thief, and in passing along the road made on low land and turnpiked some four feet high, and near a small thicket, Mr. Lynch espied the thief. He had known him before. The officer did not see him, but he had seen Mr. Lynch and the officer and was hiding in the thicket. Mr. Lynch had to comprehend his situation in a moment. He could not counsel with the officer because he would be discovered. Mr. Lynch gently pulled up on the reins of the team, reuested the officer not to drive so fast. Just at the right time Mr. Lynch leaped from the buggy and rushed for the thicket so quick as to take the thief by sur-The first words the thief uttered were, "Lynch, I'm gone to h-l. After a gentle application of Lynch law and or-namenting the gentleman with irons, his face was set toward old Jefferson, and we learn that the officer, thief and horses have arrived safely there, to the great joy of its inhabitants. The thief is an old offender, having served a term of years at Auburn State Prison. Doubtless he ill arrive again at his old home. Mr. Lynch has been liberally rewarded. The officer has remarked that he discovered Mr. Lynch, to be very much agitated before he leaped the buggy, and began to surmise that he was to be a victim. He was truly a victim, but of a different kind from what he apprehended he might be; a victim, now, we hope, crowned with glory for his success and perseverence. Some of the readers of the Independent may inquire why we do not give more religious information. We will say there is no special information to give that is very flattering. We would be perfectly willing to give it impartially, f there was any. Not over one fourth of the people attend church. Bad Enough

The Rome correspondent of the Utica Herald under date of July 17th, has the grove, on French Street, July 30th, and following: Some days ago an item appeared in the Utica Herald relative to a difficulty of A. F. Goodenough, in Cleveland, Oswego county, charged with attempted arson. The following has since "Frank W. Webb, a young man some > ablishment, (attempted, as alleged, to be set on fire) made complaint a few days ago before J. N. Conant, a justice of the peace, at West Vienna, against said Goodenough, Ella Reeder, Julia A. Wood, and Ervander Wood, charging them with conspiracy in compelling him Frank) to sign a written confession to the effect that he (Frank) was the one who had attempted to set the fire, and exonerating Goodenough. The com-plainant alleged that the written confession or statement was brought to him all drawn up, and he, by means of threats and a loaded pistol presented at his head, was compelled to copy and sign it. In separating, Frank claims he picked up and pocketed the original paper and carried it off with him. On the examination before Esquire Conant, he held Julia A. Wood and A. F. Goodenough to bail in the sum of $250 each, and these two persons were to-day brought to Rome to give bail. Recorder Van Dresar took bail this afternoon, the father and mother of Julia Wood becoming her sureties, and N. P. Rudd becoming the surety of Goodenough. Whether Ervander Wood and Ella Reeder were arrested or not, your correspondent did not learn. As soon as Goodenough was released from custody, the constable who brought him here immediately arrested him again on another charge, the nature of which your correspondent did not learn. It seems to be a queer mix of things and of individuals.

The Oswego Times adds: Another story says that Goodenough has attempted to fire the house in which he lived, a house rented with a man with whom he had quarreled, and it is not unlikely that this was the charge on which the Rome correspondent heard he was arrested. Goodenough was bailed at Pulaski on the first charge of arson in the sum of $800.

(Editorial Correspondence of the Journal.) Wanderings:

My DEAR RIDER:—The ten weeks vacation allowed by the New York Institution, though not as long as that allowed by other Institutions, is nevertheless all others most suitable for rest and for something in this season of sun-strokes and perspiration.

All the pupils, with the exception of perhaps about forty, have gone to spend their vacation with their parents and friends, and they will enjoy their ten weeks of vacation. Business matters preventing a speedy departure on my art, and also on the part of a "chum, ve were forced to stay about a week in the neighborhood of our alma mater. At last we got off. Bright and early Monward on one of Vanderbilt's trains. We stopped at Yonkers to catch the Chicago express, and as we had some thirty minates in which to wait, we took a stroll around the place. Yonkers is emphatically a city of villas. Cosey little villas, too, having beautifully laid out grounds around them. Prices are high, and the laxury of living there is enjoyed almost solely by those that have money to live on. I remember once going round the place with a real estate agent, and being moderately scared by the high figures he now and then favored me with. Never-

Shall Mute Marry Mute?

BY JARBY.

The following extract from the twenty fourth Report of the New York Insti tution, but few of the readers of the Journal can have seen, and thus may find it interesting, as showing the views held by so eminent an authority as the late Dr. H. P. Peet on the subject of marriages of the deaf and dumb, which some cold-blooded philosophers, like Dr. Home, would have prohibited by law, and which in some countries in Europe each, but it turned out that the mute had not enough English at command to make the charge, and, so the paper said, he could neither understand the sign lan-guage, nor manual alphabet. As a matcan only be contracted by special permission of the courts: ter of course the arrested party was dis-charged, and I was told by a friend that "It seems not out of place here to speak of a subject which, perhaps, excites as much interest in the public mind as any other connected with the deaf and dumb—we refer to the freuency of marriages among our former pupils. We have seen an occasional notice of a marriage ceremony performed by signs between a deaf-mute bride and bridegroom, copied far and wide in the newspapers of the day, often to an ex-tent hardly surpassed by the publicity given to the details of a royal marriage; an account of a marriage ceremony be-tween two inhabitants of another planet could hardly excite more general interest.

"Marriages among the educated deaf and dumb are not, however, rare in proportion to their numbers. It is believed that the instances which have occurred in in this country, in some of which both parties were mutes, in others but one, have amounted to hundreds. That, in all a few little calls on deaf mute friends of these instances, the connection has been ours, but did not do all the visiting we judiciously formed, we cannot affirm; intended to. Early on the morning of but it is certain that the deaf and dumb Friday, we found ourselves safe and snug form no exception to the general law of in bed at the Vanderbilt House, Syra-cuse. Here, eight years, ago the first happiness of the individual and the great-Convention of the Empire State Association was held. Our readers will re-

About twenty mutes dumb, of all persons, are dependent for their means of social happiness on a very narrow circle. The family circle in which their earlier years were passed, must in time be scattered abroad; and prudenceadmonishes them to provide, each for himself This letter is quite long, but I hope it a home where they will be sure not to be will be of some little interest to our read-looked on as intruders, where in sickness ers. or at borading houses, do not always experience, and in health can enjoy that full communion of mind with mind, so difficult of access to the deaf and dumb, save among themselves, and yet so ardently desired.

"In thwarting this natural desire, their friends and guardians often act only on Tickets purchased at the Company's against their own interest. The hope of forming at some period a happy marriage is, in minds of the young of each sex, one of the strongest incentives to prudence, industry and virtue. To advise and control a choice that might otherwise be made unwisely, is certainly a part of parental duty; but to take away that incentive to good conduct entirely, except in obedience to a positive divine precept, is a very questionable exercise of even parental authority. And in this case no such precept, either expressed or implied, can be found.

"Some have urged as a reason against marriages among the deaf and dumb, the possibility of transmitting their own infirmity to their children; but experience has shown this objection to have very little weight In the Eighteenth Report ty freely. Unless the paper leaves self of this Institution, after a careful examination of all the cases of hereditary and ed, no matter how much can be said and collateral deafness that have come to our knowledge, the conclusion formed was. that cases of the latter class are far the two years ago, I predicted that it would most numerous; that hereditary deafness is rare, and that persons born deaf and dumb are not more liable to have deaf and dumb children than their brothers and sisters born in full possession of all their faculties. Consequently, if the small chance of the birth of a deaf-mute child ought to have weight in preventing a marriage, the reason would apply as strongly to the brothers and sisters of a deaf-mute as to the mute himself."

[To the above I would add that a greater accumulation of facts shows that the marriage of two congenital mutes is not

Our Sunday School.

At the concert for June held on Sunday, the 8th, it was voted by the children that the money, collected during the past year, should be given to the American Board of Foreign Missions, with a request that it be devoted to the special mission of Mrs. Van Lennep in elevating the women of Syria.

This lady recently gave an interesting account, (on empty stomachs, 'tis true, as tea was delayed an hour by the want of a little prudence in chosing the time for lecture, but still a very interesting account) of her labors in Syria, and other parts of the world.

By the terms of her school, upon the donation of a sum of money, a native girl of Syria is chosen to be educated, the charge therefor being forty dollars a she bears for life. Our scholars were protege over in Asia, and voted to name her Sophia Gallaudet, after the mother of our President, and the grandmother of all deaf-mutes. They also voted to recommend that Sophia Gallaudet, when educated, should, if the circumstances of her life permitted, devote herself to the education of the poor deaf-mutes of Syria. The entire sum collected this year amounted to $64.47, and it was voted to Mrs. Van Lennep's mission, with the understanding that the donation was to be repeated from year to year, till the education of Sophia is completed.

Who knows but with this action the foundation of the education of the deaf rattled away so that she shouldn't have results with more frail agents than the In Albany I met Rev. Mr. Berry. He a chance to say no. It took him nearly hand of a woman.—Silent World.
